They traveled together as far as Linz, when the stranger, an-nouncing his intention of putting up at the same hotel as his companion, suggested that they should drive thither from the station together. To this the postmaster agreed, and accordingly they both got into a two-horse closed convoyance that was waiting outside. Shortly after starting the pseudo-insur-ance broker offered the unsuspecting postmaster his snuff-box, but no soone had Herr Pesal partaken of its contents than he lost consciousness. When he began to recover his senses he was being driven at a furious speed across the open country. While still in a confused state Peszel asked his companion whither they were bound, but instead of replying the latter applied a damp cloth to Herr Peizt's face, which caused the postmaster to relapse into his former unconscions condition.

He has no recollection of what occurred for some time afterward, but in the morning he once more revived and found himself in a small open trap, seated next to a man he had never seen before. Another man, in peasant's dress, was leading the horse. Horr Peszl at once remarked that his bag of valuables had disappeared, together with his for coat, which had been replaced by a thinner one made of a kind of Tyrolesic homespun cloth. They were driving along a valley unknown to Herr Pessi. In the course of half an hour they stopped in front of a dilapidated peasant house, built of rough, gray stone. The postmaster was hidden to alight, and was conducted to a large, bare room on the ground floor, where he was kept prisoner for four days. Food was inverght to him by the man dressed as a peasant.

Last Tuesday, toward three o'clock in the morning, Herr Peszl was aroused from his sleep by the same individual, and after dressing himself, was led about two hundred pages from the house, where a sledge was waiting for them. It was snowing hard, and almost nitch dark. As they drove along Herr Peszl pressed his jailer with questions. but all the answer he could get was that he was being driven home. About an hour and a half from the time of their start they pulled up with a forty yards of a small railway station. On alighting Herr Peszl found himself face to face with the man who had traveled with him to Linz. That mysterious individual handed to Herr Peszi his fur coat and money bag, together with a ricket for Steyr, whither he urged him to return at once, as he was wanted by the All this was the work of a couple of minutes; the train was in the change, station, and Herr Pesal had only just the to take his seat without asking further and the change. further questions. On examining his money bag he found it empty, which can not have caused him much supprise. On reaching home he was shown the following telegram received at the Neuzeng postoffice during his absence; "Thank God! I am alive, and hope to return in two days. The document is chiefly important as marking the first great step toward the marking the first great step toward the soverance of the two provinces of Massachusetts and New Hampshire, and as well award the establishment of New Hampshire as a separate provincial government. In this latter respect it is more interecting to Granite State folks than to us of Massachusetts, for it recalls the fact that in the final decision in the boundary matter in England, despite much wire-pulling on this eide of the occur in the early stages of the matter, New Hampshire had been given several hundred thousand acres more than she had even claimed. In itself, too, the old paper is of interest we as example of engraver and servener work on official records in those days. The well-presurved state in which it has remained leaves the text clear and legible. It is engreesed in old English in the nentest mainer, a masvel of patient execution. The salutation: "Goorge the Second, by the Grace of God." extends across the top in letters an Inch in diameter, except the initial letter, "G," an example of intricate soroll-work, elaborate in the extreme, envireling a fine copper-plate engraving of George II, in soyal robes and decorated with the order of St. George. Man and Beast

Mustang Liniment is older than most men, and used more and more every year.

By relying on testimonials written in vivid glowing language of some miraculous cures made by some largely puffed up doctor or patent medicine has hastened thousands to their graves; the readers having almost insane faith that the some miracle will be performed on them, that these testimodals mention, while the so-called medicine is all the time hastening them to their graves. Although we have

Thousands Upon Thousands 111 of testimonials of the most wonderful eares, luntarily sen' us, we do not publish them, as they do not make the cores. It is our medicine, Hop Bitters, that make the cures. It has never failed and never can. We will give reference to any one for any discase similar to their own if desired, or will refer to any neighbor, as there is not a neighborhood in the known world but can show its

A Losing Joke.

"A prominent physician of Pittsburgh said to a lady patient who was combining of her contracted it needs, and of his institute to care her, lokingly said." Fry Hop Bithres! The lady took it is carnest and used the Bitters, from which she obtained permanent health. She now issueds at the doctor for this loke, but he is not so well pleased with it, as it can him a good parient.

Fees of Doctors.

The fees of sloctors at $3.00 a visit would. tax a man for a year, and in need of a daily visit, over $1,000 a year for medical attend-ance alone! And one single bottle of Hop Ditters taken in time would save the $1,000 and all the year's elektrosis.
